Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Sunday 21 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Bright but with a chance of rain later.

Today:
A largely dry and bright day today but rather breezy initially. Some sunny spells this morning and into the afternoon with a risk of outbreaks of rain later in the day as winds fall light. Feeling mild. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Tonight:
Mostly cloudy overnight in the south with outbreaks of rain at times. Drier to the north with some partly cloudy skies. Winds remaining light throughout. Minimum temperature 3 deg C (37 deg F).

Monday:
Monday will likely be similar to Sunday with some outbreaks of rain at times and partly cloudy skies. Staying on the mild side as winds remain light. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Becoming windy on Tuesday and Wednesday with outbreaks of rain. Becoming drier later on Wednesday and into Thursday but with a risk of showers. Remaining largely mild.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.